RAMMED FRENCH LINER DOCKED JUST IN TIME

Collision With Freighter Berwind in Bay.

THE BERWIND LESS HURT

Pilot of French Liner Says Berwind Did Not Take Course She Signalled.

The French steamship Hudson, entering port with eighty-three passengers from Bordeaux and Spain, was rammed by the New York and Porto Rico liner Berwind. outbound, about 7 o'clock vesterday morning inside of Quarantine. The Hudson was so badly damaged that she ran straight for the Bay Ridge shore with water pouring through a big hole in her port bow. She docked at the foot of Sixty-fifth street with the aid of the towboat John Nicholas of the Dalzell Towing Company. The Berwind not so badly pier in the Atlantic Basin.

Both vessels were proceeding in com-paratively clear weather and as the Hudson approached the Berwind, according to Capt. David of the French liner and Pilot Beebe, the latter gave the single blast indicating that he would turn to starboard, passing the Berwind on her port side. He said the Berwind answered his signal.

Without warning then the Berwind kept on as though to pass the starboard of the Hudson and when she was within twenty yards of the French liner Beebe saw that a collision was inevitable and stopped and backed his engines. On drove the Berwind until her nose crashed into the port bow of the Hudson, striking and crumpling in her plates above and below the waterline. By this time the Berwind had stopped and reversed engines. The shock parted the two vessels and they drifted apart.

Most of the Hudson's passengers were third class and they became very much excited until the pilot headed the wounded excited until the phot headed the wounder steamship for the shore. At the same time the towboat John Nicholas had put for the wounded vessel and took her in tow and with the tug's engines and the liner's power they docked in quick time, with the Hudson sinking by the head rapidly.

When the Hudson was docked all her When the Hudson was docked all her steerage passengers were taken aboard the John Nicholas and to Ellis Island, while the cabin passengers were taken up to the French Line's piers at the foot of West Forty-fourth street. Work was immediately begun on lightering the liner's cargo to save it from the inrush of waters and also to lighten the vessel.

Meanwhile the Berwind turned nose and ran for her pier. The extent of her damages was not given out at the Porto Rican Line offices yesterday.

intermyer Says Grand Trunk Would He said: Give That for Line.

Samuel Untermyer, arguing yesterday before Supreme Court Justice Central from selling the majority stock of the Rutland Railroad to the New Haven road, said that "the Interstate Com Naven road, said that 'the Interstate Commerce Commission is the greatest triumph of modern times and has saved the country from government ownership of railroads.'

Mr. Untermyer represents the minerity stock holders of the Rutland, whose stock is worth $10 in the open market and who want to compel the New Haven to buy their stock at $105 a share, the price to be paid by the New Haven for the control of the Rutland. He said that if all the Rutland and stock were free from majority control the shareholders could get $250 a share from the Grand Trink, which wants to get a line into New England.

Mr. Untermyer insisted that the present policy of the courts is to protect the minority, and pointing to counsel for the New Haven and New York Central roads he said. 'The spirit of to-day is just as foreign to these gentlemen as if there had been no change in the trend of affairs. They can see only as far as their noses. They don't seem to know that the minority cannot be treated as 'strikers' or blackmailers We've come to an age when the courts will protect the minority.'
